DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

1. A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on June 19, 2003 has been entered.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

3. Claims 5 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Mueller (USPN 5,296,291).

Mueller discloses layers in a sheet material (Column 4, line 65) made from thermoplastic material (Column 4, line 65 to Column 5, line 19), wherein the bottom layer contains perforated holes that extend through the thickness of the layer (Figure 1, #14). The holes of the bottom layer are aligned with another layer, and the holes are not laminated to said layer since the holes are free of material to which the adhesive would adhere (Figure 1, #18). Between the two layers, an adhesive layer (Figure 1, #40) laminates the layers together. Since the bottom layer and the second layer are made of different materials (Column 5, lines 11 – 19), it is inherent that the layers would have different coefficients of thermal expansion.

A recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. In a claim drawn to a process of making, the intended use must result in a manipulative difference as compared to the prior art. See In re Casey, 152 USPQ 235 (CCPA 1967) and In re Otto, 136 USPQ 458, 459 (CCPA 1963).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

4. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

5. Claims 6, 8 and 9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Mueller (USPN 5,296,291).

Mueller discloses layers in a sheet material (Column 4, line 65) made from thermoplastic material (Column 4, line 65 to Column 5, line 19), wherein the bottom layer contains perforated holes that extend through the thickness of the layer (Figure 1, #14). The holes of the bottom layer are aligned with another layer, and the holes are not laminated to said layer since the holes are free of material to which the adhesive would adhere (Figure 1, #18). Between the two layers, an adhesive layer (Figure 1, #40) laminates the layers together. Since the bottom layer and the second layer are made of different materials (Column 5, lines 11 – 19), it is inherent that the layers would have different coefficients of thermal expansion.

Mueller discloses the claimed invention except for the first layer comprising polyimide and the second layer comprising polyethylene. It would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to select polyethylene and polyimide, since it has been held to be within the general skill of a worker in the art to select a known material on the basis of its suitability for the intended use as a matter of obvious design choice.

In re Leshin, 125 USPQ 416.

Mueller discloses the claimed invention except for the adhesive not being present in the region of the holes. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to leave the area of the film containing the holes free of adhesive, since it has been held that the omission of an element and its function in a combination where the remaining elements perform the same functions as before involves only routine skill in the art.

In re Karlson, 136 USPQ 184.
